BEAUTIFUL.

From the Kentucky Gazette.

[A mother, upon visiting the grave of her little child, in our lovely Cemetery, found the following touching and beatiful poem placed upon it by the hands of the gifted authoress, accompanied by a sprig of cedar. Schlom, if ever, has so very delicate a tribute been paid to the "loved and lost" of that silent city:

LITTLE GRAVE. Dear little grave, be-trewn with flowers, tool's smile thy some our tears thy showers; I come to claim of thee a part, And o'er thee bend a yearning heart. I come and kneel with upraised eyes, While on my lips each murmar dies; As faith beholds be vond the skies, The bud whose seed within thee dies!

Dear little grave, thou dost enshrine The treasured dust we thee consign, To keep for us until the day When souring soul shall claim as clay! Thou hide 'st no woe, sweet little bed, For well we know thro' thee Christ led Our speldess lamb from earth's dark world To light and love in his dear fold, Where we when made pure as the child, Again may clasp the undefiled!
